The Daily Oregonian.

No Flag but the Old Flag—the Red, White and Blue,
With the Stars of a Union unbroken and true!
Arise and defend it, ye sons of the brave,
Whose blood bought the banner your valor must save.

THURSDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 8, 1864.

News of To-Day.

The short dispatch we publish relates almost entirely to Sherman and his progress through Georgia.

The latest Richmond papers claim to have encouraging news from there, but they are very careful not to print it. Everything is going as well as they desire, but they don't say how.

All available rebel forces are evidently being gathered to check his progress, and they promise he cannot escape; indeed, he does not seem anxious to do so. We have no idea that he considers himself engaged in any such attempt. We await the issue of his movements with the greatest interest, as does every one who wishes well to the country, and there is no reason to believe that he has met any check or sustained any disaster.

Despotism.

This is the most common and persistent cry of the enemies of the Government in the Northern States, and was their most effective argument before the election. This complaint against Lincoln and the Administration was uttered and repeated continually, at that time, by demagogues who deserved, but never experienced the power of the Government to punish their sympathy with the rebellion, and was listened to by the ignorant crowds that compose the rank and file of the so-called Democratic party.

In times of civil war, when the Government is straining every nerve to crush out treason, and when bad men are organized within our own Northern States in secret leagues, covenanted by treasonable oaths to aid the rebellion, and allied with treason so closely that they deserve a halter, it is to be expected that every possible means will be resorted to, to overthrow a Government whose every success sets a deeper seal upon the political fate of all who oppose and hinder it.

This administration would be more than human if its every act was perfect, and all its efforts as well undertaken as the light of history in time developes they might have been; but its acts have been ever based on public necessity when seeming to exceed the ordinary course of justice, and the determination of the Government has been to effect by the most reasonable means possible, the restoration of the Union. The character of the President stands forth to-day in brilliant contrast with the traitorous intent of those who are now arrayed in open rebellion or secret treason. The American people are with him overwhelmingly. The army that fights our battles sustains him by tremendous majorities, and it is mostly the disaffected and the viciously ignorant who cavil at his course.

The man who has guided the helm through the past stormy and tempestuous times—who has been re-nominated with unanimity, and re-elected by an overpowering majority, can well afford to treat with contempt the cavil of the hungry crew that bark at him.

One month ago to-day the issue of the struggle was much less plainly shadowed than it is to-day. The return of almost every State has added certainty to the result, and the cause of the Union is sustained with more confidence and certainty than ever before since the President and the people have been tried, as by fire, and neither have been found wanting.

California, Nevada, Oregon!—Tell us where is the despotism that controlled these? They have spoken the voice of a free and educated people, and the vice, ignorance and treason in our midst have been abashed before the mighty sound.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean.—Tuesday evening we were, as a people, fortunate in being able to witness the performance of that most masterly of Shakspeare's productions, the Merchant of Venice, with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean in the principal characters of Shylock and Portia. The play abounds in the most exquisite passages of which our language is capable, and the part of Shylock especially, is one of the masterly conceptions of a mind whose resources exceeded perhaps that of any other that ever penned thoughts that became immortal. The English language has been purified and perpetuated by the genius of the Bard of Avon, and the scholar, poet, sage and statesman to-day make pilgrimages to Stratford-on-Avon where he lived, and tread with sacred homage the scenes that are made memorable by having been trod by him, near the precincts of what was once his home. The nation that claims him, estimates him no more than do we, who have inherited the language, and in many respects the customs, of the isle from whence we sprang; whose people are our people, and whose God is our God, and whose poets and philosophers are all akin to us in thought as well as in origin.

Many a lip among us unwittingly utters the familiar words of Shakespeare, and many a household word is derived—unconscious though the multitude may be that use it—from a volume that will be treasured as a classic, so long as the English tongue is spoken.

The fame of Mr. Kean is far above our criticism. We have not the pen of the accomplished connoisseur to tune to his praise, if we could attempt it; but we must say that if the character of Shylock was worthy of the immortal bard, the delineation of Mr. Kean is worthy of the fame that for near two generations, has accorded him the highest order of dramatic art, worthy of the genius and earning with which he dignifies the stage. It must be such as "Sweet Will," himself would have accorded to the character that has won so much of his own immortality. There was a terrible force in this character as Mr. Kean gave it to us, that any one must appreciate that reads the play after seeing him perform it.

Mrs. Kean, the portly dame of to-day, is not the girlish Ellen Tree who pleased the world long since, but her acting was charming, and the part of the advocate, assumed by her, was one of the crowning features of the whole performance. The appeal for mercy to the Jew, was as beautifully done as her great reputation warrants, and it is hard to say, whether the charm of her manner or the force of his, added most to the merit of the play.

They are accompanied and assisted by distinguished actors, whose reputation is only eclipsed in part, by talent few can ever hope to equal.

Our citizens are indebted to Manager Potter for an enterprise and energy that secured for us a great pleasure.

Meteors Seen at Shasta on the Night of the 13th November.—Previous to reading in our paper an article from Professor B. Silliman, Jr., to report him observations on falling stars or showers of meteors which had been anticipated by astronomers from the 13th to the 14th instant, my attention was attracted, on the night of the 13th instant, whilst riding into Shasta, by the falling of innumerable stars from the heavens. Not having a celestial map for reference, nor being familiar with the principal constellations, I cannot give the apparent starting point of the meteors, nor fix the approximate paths of them all, but will only report my observations of the paths, coloring and [illegible] of the most noteworthy meteors as they appeared from this standpoint.

About midnight I observed the first meteor, which was moving with velocity to the eastward; after which are followed another every ten or fifteen minutes. They seemed to shoot off in a circle downward about an angle of 45 degrees to the eastward. Soon after one o'clock, eight or ten fell lazily, inclining to the eastward. Occasionally a star shot off from the east with great velocity, leaving a brilliant trail behind. I counted some fifty falling stars which blazed for a moment and then disappeared. The point of starting appeared to be a short distance to the east and below the North Star, and apparently over Mount Shasta.

It was as beautiful a moonlight night as I ever saw. Far away to the north was Mount Shasta, bathed in mellow radiance. While I was admiring the view of the mountain, a meteor of extraordinary brilliancy fell slowly down to the summit, as if resting there like a gem in a coronet. From half-past one until two o'clock stars fell in showers at ten or fifteen minutes intervals. Some were more brilliant than others, casting a bright scintillation of violet color, and were about a minute in falling. The second group were of a deep crimson color, and much larger apparently than the fixed stars, and described a small arc in the sky, and were confined to a small space in the heavens. The last shower of falling stars was of the most extraordinary brilliancy. They appeared to proceed from fixed stars, and in their flight made an arc to the east and west, and now and then one dropped some distance nearly perpendicular, and then burst into innumerable scintillations, and finally disappeared.—Correspondent of the S. F. Bulletin.

The Rebels make Sorghum Flour.—A good flour, something like buckwheat, is made from sorghum seed. Sorghum is grown extensively in Georgia, and the people there are trying to make the plant available for flour. The Savannah Republican says:

We have samples of sorghum flour, made of the seed of the China cane. The planter who sends it has no means of bolting this flour, nor had he taken off the hull of the seed before grinding; the consequence is that the flour has a pinkish color.

Those who have made a trial of this excellent flour represent it to be an admirable substitute for buckwheat. Made into hoe cake, it is a very savory bread. It is likely to come into very general use, if prepared, like wheat flour, by bolting.

Whooping Cough.—The Swedish journals publish a statement to the effect that whooping cough can be cured by inhaling the air from the purifying apparatus in gas works. One Stockholm writer adds:

"This knowledge we have had for two or three months. I know a family where three children were cured by three visits to the purifying house. Our most distinguished physician for the diseases of children, Professor Ablin, has found the remedy equally effective on a patient of his own family. I have seen a boy from three to four years of age be cured by six visits, the first three lasting ten to fifteen minutes; the latter, on the contrary, thirty to forty-five minutes." The practice of sending children to gas works to inhale the gas from newly opened purifiers has been adopted in France for two years past.

Destructive Fire at Tumwater, W. T.—Last Monday afternoon, about three o'clock, the building at Tumwater formerly known as the "Tumwater House," occupied by Mr. F. M. Rhoades as a residence, was burned to the ground. When discovered, the fire had made too much headway to be subdued, but by the almost superhuman exertions of the citizens it was prevented from extending to the adjoining buildings. A house on the south side stood no more than three or four feet from the building consumed, but a strong breeze blowing to the northward, it was saved, as also the buildings on the other side, which were separated by an alley. We are informed that Messrs. Gangloff and Rhoades are the only sufferers, the former owning the house, which was valued at about $1,000, and the latter losing almost all his household furniture, clothing, etc. The origin of the fire is unknown.—Washington Standard.

Marine Disaster.—The British Colonist of Nov. 29th says: A schooner arrived last evening from Port Angelos reporting the schooner Brandt capsized off Port Angelos during Saturday's gale and all hands supposed to be drowned. A large schooner, believed to be the same vessel, had been previously seen standing off from shore, but her name and destination were unknown. Yesterday morning Capt. Montford, of the Northern Light, discovered a vessel bottom up, which proved to be the Brandt. Her boat was observed floating close by, but not a trace was found of the captain or crew, and there were unhappily too strong grounds for concluding that they had all perished. The Brandt was a fine large schooner, and had occasionally visited Victoria. On these occasions she had on board the Captain, his wife, two sons and a deck hand. Captain Montford, with the aid of Indians, was engaged in kedging the wreck ashore.

A merchant of this city, just returned from a visit to the front of General Grant's army, speaks of the remarkable good health of the soldiers, owing probably to the efforts in this direction made by the Government and the two National Sanitary Commissions. He says that deaths by fever are now remarkably small, and have been throughout summer and fall. He had the privilege of taking a look at the fortifications of Richmond from General Butler's observatory, and he describes them as of the most formidable character, indicating the desperate nature of the resistance making by the rebels to the capture of their capital. But serious as are the obstacles to the capture of Richmond, it is not doubted by any of our officers that they will be overcome and the place taken. Even the rebel officers captured admit that it is only a question of time.—Boston Traveller.

A correspondent of the London Times, writing from Montreal, furnishes important information respecting the disposition of the rebel "exiles" in Canada toward a peace. While some of them are "still for war," and say that the Confederacy can fight for fifty years, and so forth, others "high in the confidence" of the Richmond Government confess that a day may come when the South, from lack of men and supplies, will be anxious to make a peaceful compromise. The arrangement to be an independent Southern executive, an American alliance, offensive and defensive, based on the Monroe doctrine, the Washington Cabinet to decide whether it be first enforced in Mexico or Canada, and a free tariff, under which the New England States would have a decided preference over England and France in the cotton trade.

Victoria Items.—We learn from Victoria papers that the crack sloop Monitor was driven ashore and struck on the rocks northward of Trial Island. Assisted by Indians, the crew made their escape by jumping on the rocks, though doing so with difficulty. The total loss was $1,200.

The [illegible], a large bark-rigged vessel, was aground two miles to the northward of Nath Beacon, but was afterwards got off without severe damage.

A letter from Fort Gaines, Alabama, October 16th says:

Our railroad is almost completed, and when done will run a regular train from the pier at Navy Cove to the pier at Mobile Point, a distance of five hundred miles. The building of this road was given to Lieut. [illegible], of the 20th Wisconsin, and he has been diligently at work on it ever since. When completed and in running order, it will reflect great credit on the colonel, as it is his first attempt in that line.

The steamship Great Eastern has been purchased by capitalists for £25,000 to lay the Atlantic cable, for which service they receive $50,000, if successful. The French Government has made overtures to purchase the vessel, and received the reply that after the cable was laid she would be sold for what she cost her present owners.

[Despatches to the Oregonian.]

DATES TO NOVEMBER 28TH.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—A Louisville dispatch says that General Burbridge has reached Cumberland Gap with his force. The rebels under Breckinridge are now confronted by a formidable army. Cumberland Gap is safe and so long as it is held, Breckinridge will be prevented from invading Kentucky from that quarter; and he will scarcely venture an attack on us. Should the rebels attempt to retreat, it is presumed that Burbridge will advance and harass them.

New York, Nov. 30.—The Post's special dispatch says that Richmond papers of the 28th are silent respecting Sherman's movements. They show the rebels to be in great tribulation, and there is every reason to believe that Sherman is making his way to the coast.

The Augusta Constitutionalist of the 22d, says that raiding parties of the enemy tapped the railroad ten miles east of Macon, and destroyed a number of trains, and the freight trains turned back in haste. Heavy cannonading and musketry fire was heard east of Gordon. It was supposed that General Payne, at Gordon, had been attacked. Milledgeville had been entirely evacuated by our forces before the enemy arrived. Everything of value had been brought away.

An Augusta dispatch of the 21st, says the advance of Sherman, on Milledgeville, was a feint for the purpose of concentrating our forces there, bearing on Centreville, and keeping them there, whilst the whole force of the enemy moves upon and captures Augusta and Savannah.

The Augusta Constitutionalist derides the idea of the progress of a column, under Sherman, of about 10,000 cavalry, who visited Madison, Morgan county, on the State Railroad, and burned it on the 19th, and on the 20th, a bridge was sent up the road and found the enemy at Buck Head, eleven miles nearer Augusta. On the 19th, some of their men were seventy-five miles away from Augusta, who were probably nothing but a raiding party.

The Augusta Chronicle, of the 20th, says that a large cavalry force left Branchville, South Carolina, bound across the country, in the direction of Atlanta, in view of cutting off the Yankee communication down the Georgia road, in this direction. It is said that Breckinridge was to leave upper East Tennessee, with his troops, on the 12th, for the Georgia line. With Hood in his rear, Breckinridge on his flank, and 30,000 veterans in his front, Sherman cannot escape.

The Augusta Constitutionalist says: As we write the glad and familiar shouts of the veteran troops arising from the South Carolina department comes up from the street. If Sherman retreats this way he will hear the whistle of bullets from the trusty guns that have so often pointed at fanatics on the banks of the Potomac and the James; before our readers will see this, other glad sounds will be heard on our streets.

The Macon papers of the 20th say: Gen. Hardee arrived this morning. Beauregard will probably be here to-morrow. Since the date of the above, communication with the East has been cut off by Sherman. Both Beauregard and Hardee are left far in the rear by Sherman. Gov. Brown, Dick Taylor and Beauregard were reported to be at Macon on the 22d.

The Richmond papers of Friday and Saturday say: They have encouraging news from Georgia, but they won't print it. They assure their readers that the official advices from Georgia are favorable as they could expect.

Battle of Cedar Run.—The correspondent of the New York World has a very long and most interesting account of this battle, and we give so much of it merely as relates to the turning of the tide of battle after the arrival of Sheridan on the field, when he found the army beaten and many guns lost:

I have said that General Sheridan slept in Winchester the night before the battle. He was aroused by the sound of the enemy's artillery about 8 A. M. to-day, and taking horse, at once made for the army at full gallop. At ten o'clock, just as the last retreat alluded to was about completed, and as the army was getting into its new position, a faint hurrah from the rear, along the pike, announced his coming. He rode his famous black horse, and asked questions as he rode of those along the line.

"Where's the Nineteenth Corps?" he inquired of a mounted officer near one of the batteries in rear of the cavalry.

"On the right, General, in those woods," was the reply.

Riding on still further, he said to another, whom he recognized: "Now, all I want, by God, is to get those men up to the rear and whip these rascals back."

One of his staff officers, coming out to meet him, announced that the situation of the army was "awful."

"Pshaw!" said Sheridan, "it's nothing of the sort. It's all right, or we'll fix it right."

The General rode on with his staff and escort, which soon became in the distance a mass of dust and gleaming hoofs, galloping past the batteries to the extreme left of the line, held by the cavalry; he rode to the front, took off his hat and waved it, while a cheer went up from the ranks no less hearty and enthusiastic than that which greeted him after the battle of Winchester. Generals rode out to meet him, officers waved their swords, men threw up their hats in an extremity of glee. Gen. Custar, discovering Sheridan at the moment he arrived, rode up to him, threw his arms around his neck and kissed him on the cheek. Waiting for no other parley than simply to exchange greeting, and to say, "This retreat must be stopped, by God!" Sheridan broke loose, and began galloping down the lines along the whole front of the army. Everywhere the enthusiasm created by his appearance was the same. It increased at last, until that part of the army in line of battle became a new being, having twice its previous will to fight, and until that part of the army in rear, hearing of it, became partially ashamed of [illegible], and came back. An organized effort was now made to get the remainder into the ranks. A regiment sent out from Winchester did provost duty, driving all before it to the front. Col. Forsyth, General Sheridan's chief of staff, took a company of cavalry and dashed in among the stragglers below Newton, urging and driving them toward their commands. Captain Crowninshield, Provost Marshal General of the army; Captain Halstead, Provost Marshal of the Sixth Corps, and other Provost Marshals did their best in forming a line of guards across the entire country in rear, which was gradually effective in preventing desertion. In a short time the stragglers were partially organized, and moving toward the front in squads, companies, and skeletons of regiments. The Army of Western Virginia, which had been so completely broken and scattered in the morning, was thus reformed in a measure and put in position. Gen. Sheridan ordered all retreat to be stopped at once, and at one o'clock P. M. had got his army established in line of battle as follows: The Sixth Corps in centre, Nineteenth Corps on the right, Gen. Crook's command on the left, Gen. Custar's cavalry division on the extreme right, and Merritt's cavalry division on the extreme left.

About 1 P. M., the enemy resumed the offensive by making a charge against our lines, which was repulsed. They then contented themselves by shelling us with artillery, which shelling gradually ceased, and at 2 P. M. all save picket firing was quiet. It was thereafter pretty certain that Early had relinquished offensive movements for the day. The enemy were discovered to be throwing up breastworks of stones, rails and earth, and it was subsequently found that they had made preparations to encamp on the field they had won. Their wagons and ambulances were brought across Cedar Run, and everything indicated their intention to retain the position during the night.

At 3 P. M. General Sheridan having completed his arrangements, awakened his army to action and the enemy from their repose, by ordering a grand advance (left half wheel) from left to right, closing in upon the enemy. The cavalry previously made a charge which disclosed the position of the foe and weakened his flanks. The advance was slightly checked in center of the line by the momentary embarrassment of the Third Division, Sixth Corps, which had to pass through a dense wood. It was resumed as soon as this difficulty was overcome, which broke their lines, after a stubborn resistance, and sent them back, careering. Firing continuous withering volleys, and aided by every piece of artillery which could be made available in rear, our enthusiastic and determined column pressed the rebels so closely that they were unable to make a decisive stand at any point.

On through Middletown and beyond the enemy hurried, and the Army of the Shenandoah pursued. The roar of musketry now had a gleeful, dancing sound. The guns fired shotted salutes of victory. Custar and Merritt charged in right and left, doubled up the ranks of the foe, taking prisoners, slashing, killing, driving as they went. The marching of the infantry was more majestic and more terrible. The lines of the foe swayed and broke before it everywhere. Beyond Middletown, on the battle field fought over in the morning, their columns were completely overthrown and disorganized. They fled along the pike and over the fields like sheep. Custar took a gun, in one of his charges, captured from us in the morning—the first gun we had captured during the day. Many more guns were to be ours before nightfall.

It was dusk when the whole of the rebel army, forsaking every inch of ground they had won, went across Cedar Run pell-mell, and went flying on towards Strasburg. Two brigades of our cavalry (Wells' and Lowell's) pursued, charging them at every chance, and increasing the rout before them. At nightfall our cavalry entered Strasburg, while the enemy was still passing through the town, and from that time until eight o'clock confined themselves, with the assistance of a division of infantry afterward sent forward by General Sheridan, to picking up prisoners and gathering together and sending to the rear the artillery, army wagons and ambulances which had been left by the foe in their headlong flight. Forty three guns, including nearly all of those taken from us during the day, have already been counted, and it is said that the number will reach fifty. The medical supplies and wagons captured from the Nineteenth Corps in the morning are restored. Also several of our ambulances and wagons, and a hundred or more belonging to the enemy. The prisoners, were it not for the darkness, would number nearly two thousand, but it has been impossible to provide guards for them as rapidly as they are captured. A large number sent to the rear will probably escape during the night, but all are so completely tired out with the day's fighting and marching that we shall pick up hundreds asleep by the wayside when the morning dawns. The enemy had reached Fisher's Hill, and may doubtless get beyond. Their defeat is thorough. The inevitable darkness has prevented the cavalry and the army from making a further pursuit, which would, to use a vulgarism, have effectually shut up Early and his army for the rest of the season.

We thus occupy Strasburg to-night with cavalry and a division of infantry. The main army is encamped in precisely the same position which it occupied this morning. Its camp-fires, as I write, gleam brightly in the darkness for miles around, and the men, ere they lie down to sleep, are cheering over the news from our cavalry at Strasburg.

The scene at General Sheridan's headquarters to-night has been wildly exciting. Scores of officers are there, talking the battle over. General Custar arrived about nine o'clock. The first thing he did was to hug General Sheridan with all his might, lifting him in the air, whirling him around and around, with the shout: "By J——s, we've cleaned them out and got the guns!" Catching sight of General Torbett, Custar went through the same performance with him, until Torbett was forced to cry out: "There, there, old fellow, don't capture me!"

Both Generals Sheridan and Custar must pardon me for making such literal use of certain expressions used by them, which serve to illustrate in its true character the earnestness and excitement of the day. Let it be said, too, that oaths in this battle meant something, and were therefore not "in vain."

REFERRING to Grant's railroad, it is said: "Who but a parcel of Yankees would ever have thought of building a railroad along the battle-line of an army? These Yankees who have settled around Richmond have done this thing. The railroad goes over the ground with a most sublime indifference to its ups and downs. If you are seated in one of the last cars of a long train, half the time the locomotive drawing you is out of sight over a hill, but the best of all is the covered way, where the road runs through the field near Hancock, under the fire of the rebel batteries of Whitworth guns on Cemetery Hill. The rebels used to amuse themselves by shelling the train. They never did any damage, but it was deemed best to make sure against mishaps, so a breastwork for the railroad was thrown up across the entire field. Down into the cut goes the train, and whirls safely under the friendly cover of earth beyond the point of danger. With all its goings up and comings down, with all the instability of its roadway, there has never been an accident on the road. No train ever collided, none have ever got off the track. The railroad is a great thing.—Army Letter.

THE NEW ERICSSON GUN.—It has been known for some time, among a select few in naval circles, that Capt. Ericsson has been getting up a new gun to surpass anything yet known in effectiveness. One of them has been undergoing tests at the Navy Yard and down the bay, which proved entirely successful. It is a 13-inch wrought iron piece, weighs a little over 13,000 lb, and was severely tested with 70 lb of powder, burned up every grain, and rendering the 13-inch solid round shot invisible to the ordnance officer, who could not trace its progress. It is presumed it travelled about eight miles. Around the breeching it is about twenty inches thick, and if it meets the anticipations of some naval officers, it will revolutionize naval ship building.—N. Y. Tribune.

A REBEL army correspondent says that General Lee keeps a flock of chickens at his headquarters. One of them, a cock, is said to be a great favorite with the General, who has had him from the beginning of the war, and carries him wherever he goes. The General loves fresh laid eggs, no doubt. Gen. Beauregard's pet is a fine milch cow, which shares all his campaigns, and is a most indispensable companion, his health being so delicate that he can eat little else besides milk and bread.

THE country west of Rome (Ga.) has never before been visited by an army in force, and it is found to contain an abundance of grain and stock. Sherman has had, all along, sufficient supplies in his trains, but he has issued an order directing that his army must, as far as practicable, subsist on the country. He intends to divest the adjacent territory of all chances for a vagrant army moving without a supply train.

A MEMBER of the Fenian Brotherhood, in Chicago, having claimed the British protection to screen himself from the draft, was expelled from the Brotherhood.

E. A. PAUL, the N. York Times' correspondent with Sheridan's army, has been captured by guerrillas.

ALLEN'S

LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD, heals the irritated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction, even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies), or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.

LE DOYEN'S

SARSAPARILLA, YELLOW DOCK

—AND—

IODINE ALTERATIVE

FOR THE CONSTITUTION.

CLEANSE THE BLOOD.

WITH corrupt, disordered or vitiated Blood you must be sick all over. It may burst out in pimples or spots, or in some active disease, or it may merely keep you listless, depressed and good for nothing. But you cannot have good health while your blood is impure. Sarsaparilla purges out these impurities and stimulates the organs of life into vigorous action, restoring the health and expelling disease. Hence it rapidly cures a variety of complaints which are caused by impurities of the blood, such as Scrofula or King's Evil, Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter or Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Cancer or Cancerous Tumors, Sore Eyes, Female Diseases, such as Retention, Irregularity, Suppression, Whites, Sterility, Syphilis or Venereal Diseases, Liver Complaints and Heart Diseases.

Blood and Liver,

This valuable Medicine is now available to the public for the cure of

SCROFULA, CONSUMPTION, RHEUMATISM, CANCER,
HEART, LIVER AND KIDNEY DISEASES,
NEURALGIA, NERVOUS AFFECTIONS, BRONCHITIS,
DYSPEPSIA, &c.

AS A TONIC,

its operations are evinced by strengthening the digestive organs and increasing the appetite. In cases of Dyspepsia, Emaciation and Debility, an increased [illegible] of the body is the result of the employment of Iodine. The patient recovers flesh, strength and color, hitherto pale, relaxed and feeble, he becomes full, strong and florid.

Are you sick, feeble and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping over you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Le Doyen's Sarsaparilla, and cleanse out the disordered system—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again.

AS A LITHONTRIPTIC,

it has no equal, being chemically combined with Iodine, it possesses in a high degree the power of dissolving Stone in the Bladder, and irritations of the kidneys, preventing gravel formation and enlargement of the prostate gland, irritation of the neck of the bladder, dropsy, etc.
